1915 IMMIGRANT'S MEMORIES OF WHITE BEAR LAKE

by John W. Johnson

Irma Jonsson was ten years old when she arrived in White Bear Lake in 1915. Irma is my father's cousin, and at 102 years old, she is the last relative of that generation. Recently, in the community room at the Ramsey Nursing Home, she and I had coffee, sardines and crackers while she shared her childhood memories of White Bear Lake. Except for poor eyesight, Irma is in very good health, has excellent memory and enjoys visits by friends and relatives.

In 1914, Irma's family was living in Antwerp, Belgium. Her father, Carl Jonsson, was born in Sweden and Irma's mother, Isidora, was born in Norway. Carl was an engineer on a steamship freighter, the S.S. Wryhandel of Antwerp.

When World War One started, in August of 1914, a German blockade forced Carl's ship to stay in port in Finland. Carl's last letter was dated Sept. 14th. Sometime later, the ship was able to leave Finland and steamed toward Belgium. The ship was in the North Sea cruising past Holland when it hit a mine and sank, killing everyone aboard. Meanwhile, the German army was bombarding the Forts around Antwerp. On October 7th., the city of Antwerp was evacuated under heavy artillery bombardment. A large number of refugees, including Irma's family, fled to the neutral Netherlands. More than 100,000 refugees stayed there throughout the war.

Isidora's brother, John O. Johnson, of the Johnson Boat Works, made arrangements to bring Isidora and her four children to America. During the summer of 1915, Dora and her children left Rotterdam and sailed towards America. The German Navy had maintained a safe passage shipping lane for neutral Holland that went north from Holland and then around the British island. However, during the voyage, the ship was stopped by a German warship and searched by German seamen. Irma, nine years old at the time, remembers that their ship was held there for a long time before it was allowed to proceed. The ship, S.S. Rotterdam arrived in New York on July 11, 1915. When they got to Ellis Island there was another delay. The U. S. government required that a sizable financial commitment be made by sponsors for all refugees. The family spent a month at Ellis Island while John O. Johnson tried to arrange for the money. Finally, he went to see his friend L. P. Ordway who agreed to sponsor the family. When they arrived in White Bear, Mr. Ordway outfitted all of them with new shoes and clothing.

The family moved into a house just across the railroad tracks from the boat works. This house, on the corner of Lincoln and Hinckley, was where John O. Johnson lived before he built the boat works. Neighbors helped out by donating used clothing, kitchen utensils and so forth. During the trip to America, the family had practiced speaking English. By the time they got to White Bear, Irma and her younger brother, Oskar, were very good with the language. At that time, Carl Jr. was 13, Harry 12, Irma 10 and Oskar 8 years old. Carl and Harry attended school for a year or two and then went to work to help support the family. Irma and Oskar stayed in school. Their mother Dora was an excellent dress-maker and went to work for a Mrs. Krum.

White Bear had a movie theater in the old auditorium building. On Saturday, Irma could go to the show for five cents and stay there all afternoon watching the movie over and over. On summer evenings, Uncle John would sometimes take the family out on the lake for a sailboat or motorboat ride. A couple of miles west of the boat works was the Doerer farm on Otter Lake road. This was the home of the parents of uncle John's wife Annie. The Doerers had a couple of horses and cows along with chickens and turkeys. They also had a couple of noisy peacocks! "Always good food there, especially the pies!" There was the time Oskar got into the melon patch, ate too many and got sick.

Irma and her family lived on the north side of Hinckley, while Gus Amundson and his family lived on the south side. Mrs. Amundson had a cow in the back yard which was milked by the two youngest boys, Christian and Edwin. Many families had a few chickens in their yard. Irma's mother had a hand operated washing machine on the back porch. The key for the house was hidden under the washing machine. Oskar and Irma started grade school at Webster where Irma remembered all the children were required to practice fire drills. This involved sliding down the metal circular chute on the outside of the building. Later, Irma and Oskar attended Washington School. Oskar did not like school and often left to play hooky. When Oskar ran away from school, the principal, Miss Redding, would get angry and take Irma out of class to go look for Oskar. She could never find him.

It was a long walk to school in the morning. At that time, the trains still stopped at the Lake Shore Station just north of the boat works. The kids would gather there in the morning to get a ride on the train. They got a free ride up to the 4th. street station. In the winter, the kids got rides from people in horse drawn sleighs. Often they would stand on the sleigh's runners while holding on to the outside. Walking home at night, Irma was afraid while walking past the cemetery so she walked fast and in the center of the road.

Irma and Oskar spent a lot of time with the Miller kids. Matt Miller and his wife Anna had ten children, one boy and nine girls! At one time Matt worked at the boat works. Irma played with Frances and Louise. In the summer, Mrs. Miller would keep an eye on Irma and Oskar. She said, "With all my kids, watching a couple more was no problem." However, when Frances fell off the boat work's dock John O. Johnson ran down there to pull her out. Usually they all swam at a small beach just north of the boat works in front of the Millers.

A couple of years after Irma arrived in White Bear, a train derailed in front of her house. A car load of pickled pigs feet had spilled out all over the ground. Irma and Louise Miller ran home for dish pans which they filled and took home. When Irma's mother came home, she told Irma to dump the pickled pigs feet back on the tracks! Irma's mother, Dora, was a good cook, but was away during the day working as a dress maker. At Christmas time, Dora made lefse and jule kaga, and would buy some lutefisk to be served with melted butter and lemon juice. Irma liked to visit the Millers where Mrs. Miller made bread three times a week. Irma and Louise enjoyed eating fresh bread with butter and Karo syrup.

In 1915, there was no highway between the boat works and the railroad tracks. There was a street called Milner Avenue. The railroad tracks were on high ground with a low area along side between it and Milner Avenue. When snow covered the ground, the kids would use this as a sliding hill. Irma remembers using her mother's large dishpan as a sled there. Sometime later, her uncle John made a wooden toboggan for them. The Millers kept an ice skating rink shoveled on the lake. Irma had an old pair of double runners at first, but did much better when she got regular skates. Her cousin, Milton, gave Irma some exciting rides on his iceboat. "We went really fast, and it was so cold!"

Irma's younger brother, Oskar, as a teenager was restless and getting into mischief. At age sixteen, he went to the recruiting office to join the Navy. When asked his age, Oskar said, "Oh I'm about seventeen." The officer looked at Oskar and said, "I didn't hear that. Why don't you go out and come back when you are eighteen." So Oskar went outside, and immediately came back inside. "Well young man, how old are you?" Oskar said, "About eighteen." So, he was accepted, but there was a concern about meeting the weight requirement as he was very skinny. Before the physical exam, he went home and stuffed himself with bananas. He managed to pass the physical exam.

Lake Avenue ran north between the boat works and the lake. Milner Avenue was on the other side of the boat works next to the tracks and connected to Lake Avenue where the V F. W. is now. Milner Ave. is now Highway 61. In the triangle north of the boat works there were a couple of homes including the Miller family as well as a couple of businesses - Walek's Refreshment Store and Harry Darling's Auto Repairs. Next to the railroad tracks, there were many houses along Lincoln Ave., but behind those houses the land was mostly unoccupied and it was a great place for kids to play. Each winter, in the area called Ramaley Park, there was a large skating rink. Irma remembers seeing the Goheen brothers skating there. "Those boys could sure skate!" The Goheen family lived a few blocks north. Frank Goheen had played hockey for White Bear High and then for the St. Paul Athletic Club, which was the U. S. Amateur Championship team, in 1915-16 and 1916-17. After serving in World War One, Frank was part of the 1920 U. S. hockey team that won a silver medal at the Olympics in Antwerp Belgium.

When Irma was fifteen, one of the Miller girls, Marie, who was a telephone operator, helped her get a job as an operator at the White Bear Telephone company. Operators would respond to a light on the board and ask for a two digit number or the name the caller wanted and then plug into the connection. This was the beginning of Irma's career working for the telephone company. During World War II, Oskar got married and his young wife was in California while he was overseas. Irma arranged to get a transfer to Bell Telephone in California so she and her mother could be closer to Oskar's wife. Irma moved to Long Beach in 1944, and lived there for forty-five years. Later she returned to St. Paul.

Over the next several months there will be significant changes and upgrades including a new name for the White Bear Lake Area Historical Society's website at www.whitebearhistory.org. All of these improvements take a great deal of effort behind the scenes. Many hours have been contributed by Stephanie Askin from web design to database management and everything in between. Without her patience, persistence and expertise we would be in tough shape. Thank you, Stephanie for all that you do!

We would not be able to provide many of our programs and events without our numerous volunteers who make things happen. Whether it is giving tours at the House, sorting papers at the Resource Library or answering questions for visitors, we rely heavily on the help of our volunteers. Thank you to all of you—new and continuing! For more information on what you may be able to do to help please contact Sara at 651-407-5327.

From the Director's Desk...

We've kicked off another exciting year at the WBLAHS and things are starting to roll. Throughout 2008 we will be working with White Bear Township to highlight the 150th anniversary of its formation. The Town of White Bear was formed on the same day Minnesota became a State—May 11, 1858 so there will be statewide things happening this year as well.

The WBLAHS plays an important role in these local celebrations but it is much more than party planning! To learn more about the upcoming events and activities please see the Calendar of Events in this issue of The Lake Area Preserver or visit us at www.wblareahistoricalsociety.org.

The anniversaries in recent years of several of the communities that we serve have created wonderful opportunities for the WBLAHS to get the word out about our efforts to collect and preserve the stories, images and artifacts of our collective past. Did you know that our photograph collection has grown from approximately 100 images in 2001 to more than 3,500 today?! That increase is in large part due to the awareness created through the celebrations of our milestones-White Bear Lake's 125th and Mahtomedi's 75th in 2006, Dellwood's 90th in 2007 and White Bear Township's 150th this year.

We hope to see you celebrating with us throughout 2008!

-Sara
